The Clydesdale Horse Society
2022 Winter Fair
Risk Assessment Document - Venue - Lanark Agricultural Centre

The Clydesdale Horse Society will host its annual horse show, known as the Winter Fair, on 19 November 2022 at Lanark Agricultural Centre. The centre is an agricultural auction market, specifically chosen by the Society, as an example of a safe environment for the general public who will be able to attend the show on payment of an entry fee.

Safety of the public, safety of the exhibitors and their helpers and safety of the trustees and staff of the Clydesdale Horse Society is of paramount importance and this document intends to identify any potential risks which the hosting of such a show will present and the strategies taken by the Society and the Auction Market to mitigate these risks.

The Society has taken out full comprehensive public liability insurance to cover in the event of there being illness or any accident at the show the Society has employed the services of St Andrews Red Cross to be in attendance for the whole of the day. The two representatives of the St Andrews Red Cross will provide immediate health and accident support but in the event of serious injury or serious illness the medical services and the ambulance service must be called out.

It must be recognised that this is a horse show and Clydesdale Horses are the principal feature of the show . Characteristically these horses are, for the most part, docile creatures. Indeed many will argue that these are gentle giants who typically interact well with humans. However it must always be recognised by everyone that these are nevertheless animals and, by their very nature, animals can be unpredictable. These are large animals which, in the wrong circumstances, have the capacity to cause considerable damage or injury to humans and this must always be borne in mind.

Accordingly in the interests of public safety all horses brought to the show will be brought by their owners and their staff and will enter the market area through an entrance which is separate from the entrance for the general public. Horses will require either to be secured for the duration of the show in their lorries or horse boxes or taken immediately and safely to pens in the market which are available to every exhibitor.

Two experienced volunteer stewards (Janette Farley and Helen Smith) appointed by the Clydesdale Horse Society will operate in the penning area and any member of the public who accesses this area will do so at their own risk. Appropriate 'no entry' and 'enter here at your own risk' signs will be exhibited and these stewards have been instructed, as far as they are able, to refuse public entry to this area. Recognising, however, that there will be occasions where non exhibitors will refuse to accept and adhere to such instructions, the Clydesdale Horse Society takes no responsibility for any adverse consequences arising of such blatant refusal to obey instructions. The Stewards have been asked to report the names of such people, where known, to the Executive Committee of the Clydesdale Horse Society who will, in turn, refer such matters to the next Council meeting.

These two volunteers stewards , who are both very experienced horse people and who have wide knowledge of managing at Horse Shows, will be solely responsible for gathering horses together for each class and also for directing the exhibitors and their grooms to the designated access route to the showing ring.

Those exhibitors, grooms and stewards are the only people who will be allowed into this access route. At the entrance to the ring another volunteer will show the exhibitors how and where to enter for showing purposes. Only the exhibitor and the groom will be permitted to enter the showing ring with a horse.

The showing ring is a specially constructed enclosed ring with an access gate and an exit gate. The ring will be constructed of heavy duty high metal gates and members of the public are prohibited from climbing onto those gates and must view the showing from the non-showing side of the ring.

Within the ring itself, the Judge, Mr Alasdair Fletcher (and for Class 13 only Mr Irvine Anderson) will be supported by the Chief Steward, Mr James Steel and Ring Steward Bryan Lindsay. These gentlemen are experienced horsemen and their decision as to conduct of any person in the showing ring will be final. It will be the responsibility of the Chief Steward, in consultation with the judge, to direct horses into showing position for showing purposes. Apart from the Judge, the Show Organiser, the Chief Steward, the Ring Steward, the Commentator, the Recording Steward, and Amanda Stewart, the Society's nominated photographer, no other persons are permitted into the showing ring without being invited. Any other person who so enters, despite being discouraged from doing so, does so at their own personal risk.

There is a possibility that sponsors of particular showing classes may wish to present the award for the class they have sponsored and they will be invited into the showing ring and will do so only on the instructions of either the Chief Steward or Judge (es).

Exhibitors and their grooms will leave the ring area by the designated exit gate and return with their horses immediately to the horse penning area where the horse can be securely and safely housed.

The general public will have access to the event via the foyer area of the market itself; an entrance which is quite separate from the entrance for exhibitors and their horses. This takes visitors into a perfectly safe, secure self-contained area at which there will be some trade stands and the availability of limited refreshments.

The show organisers discourages the general public from making access to the penning area where horses are housed during the event, when the show is underway, Any person so entering the horse penning area before the show for viewing purposes or during the show itself when such access is prohibited, or at the close of the show does so at their own risk and at no liability to the Clydesdale Horse Society.

In terms of viewing the show itself there will be seating available at either end of the showing ring and viewers will also be able to stand in the aisle along the length of the showing ring immediately opposite from where horses are being led to enter the ring. This latter viewing area is for standing only.

Spectators are not permitted into the showing ring nor are they permitted to climb on the gates and fencing from which the ring is constructed. As with all shows some classes will have significant numbers of entries and it is vital that there is no additional congestion in the showing ring created by people who should not be there. The Judge(es) and the Chief Steward have the authority and are instructed to invite any unauthorised persons to leave the showing ring if they are found to be in that area uninvited. In the interests of everyone's safety only authorised persons who are granted such authority by the Chief Steward or judge are permitted to be in the showing ring.

Any access by a member of the public into the Showing ring or into the penning area is, therefore, not the responsibility of the Clydesdale Horse Society who will not be held either responsible nor liable for loss or injury whilst unauthorised members of the public in that area.

The Clydesdale Horse Society considers this event to be a low risk event for the following reasons:-

1. In past years this show has an excellent safety record without major incident, accident or injury.
2. The Society has taken every step possible to prevent public access from the one area of potential danger to their well-being, namely being the presence of animals.
3. All areas where horses are to be housed are in heavy duty constructed market pens.
4. The access route from the pens to the showing ring is clearly defined, spectator free and again enclosed by high metal pens on either side.
5. The showing ring is constructed by the same heavy duty metal fencing, has limited public access to it and is policed by experienced horsemen who also have experience in dealing with Clydesdale horses.

It is agreed that this risk assessment will be circulated to all organisers, stewards, judges and others, except for exhibitors, and as necessary there will be individual briefings on the morning of the show at a time to be announced. Stewards who are in attendance for the preshow day on Friday 18th November will also be briefed along these lines and a copy of this risk assessment document can be made available to all volunteers assisting the event.

This document, which will also be published on the Society website, is intended to ensure the safety of all and to enhance everyone's enjoyment of the annual showpiece Clydesdale Horse Society Winter Fair. Reference to it will also be made in the show catalogue.
